After their falling out over Alicia Rivera's attempt at alpha status as leader of the now-dissolved boy-girl Soul-M8s clique, the Pretty Committee is back "together and stronger than Zac and Vanessa." All is forgiven, and Massie Block is firmly in control of her PC alpha status. And sensitive, ever-loyal Claire Lyons has kept secret Massie's desperate measures to remain on top. With the PC back under her thumb, Massie basks in the glow of the crush of her dreams, Landon Chase. Landon is a public-school, dog-loving freshman whose pooch, Bark Obama, is a perfect match for Massie's pug, Bean. But to what lengths will Massie go in order to keep Landon's attention and make him her boyfriend? Halloween is a special time for Massie and the PC, and it's not just because of the candy --- well, maybe it's about the candy a little. With Landon otherwise occupied overseeing playtime for Bark and Bean, Massie keeps tabs on them through a hidden camera attached to a charm on Bean's collar. Before heading out to collect their Halloween booty, Massie and the PC raid Dylan Marvil's mom's closet searching for perfect accessories for their to-die-for costumes. After combining designer and vintage pieces to complete their trampire (tramp + vampire) look, they traverse the exclusive Westchester neighborhood in search of gourmet treats.

All goes well until they reach an unlit and undecorated house. Massie wants to move on, but Claire invokes the No House Left Behind motto, which means they are to hit every house, every year, with no exceptions. After the trick-or-treaters peek inside the dark house, they discover an unexpected scene inside. The relationship between Massie and Landon turns frosty after she accidentally injures Bark, and she'll do anything to get back in Landon's good graces. To make amends for hurting Bark, and to upgrade the other members of the PC to ninth-grade crushes, Massie invites Landon and his friends to a spa party at the Block Estate. The idea of ditching their eighth-grade crushes for ninth-graders doesn't appeal to everyone. At least one of the PC members is determined to embark on a path of her own, keep her old crush, and make new friends, out from under Massie's control and without her approval. Will this attempt to become independent backfire, or will the feeling of breaking free and getting out from under Massie's boot make being ostracized from the PC worthwhile? THESE BOOTS ARE MADE FOR STALKING is a smart and sassy YA novel that is peppered with Lisi Harrison's signature references to the latest trends in fashion, technology and entertainment. She realistically portrays the tender age when girls are on the cusp of becoming young women and their struggles to become self-assured and comfortable in their own skin. This latest Clique installment has a positive message wrapped in an entertaining book.

I swear Lisi H. has done it again. Massie finally starts to show an insecure side to herself. This book is full of boy drama and "upgrades" to ninth grade... I seriously recommend this book. PC forever!

It was pretty good but massie needs to loosen up and have fun. what alicia dylan kristen dont know is that massie is like clare a little but with 10x the style. if massie wants to be happy she needs to let loose and be herself

This book was amazing. I love how it wasn't very shallow or superficial like this series sometimes can be. I really loved that Massie became a real person. The ending had me on the edge of my seat!

With Massie crushing on a ninth grade boy, she's decided that the Pretty Committee must all upgrade, as well. Dylan, Kristen, and Alicia can't wait to fall for someone new, but there's no way Claire is giving up Cam. If only she could make Massie understand. She sets out determined to change her alpha's mind. Meanwhile, Massie's still trying to understand ninth grade rules and how to approach Landon. When she realizes that he's hanging out with other girls, her suspicions force the committee into stalking the school, crashing a fundraiser party, and spying in windows. Has the Pretty Committee gone too far? Will they be caught stalking and downgraded faster than you can say LBR? Will Massie give Claire some slack, given the recent turmoil of the PC, or will Claire be forced to choose between Cam and the upgraded crush? I like Claire sticking up for herself as the PC is back together once again and attempting to move higher on the social ladder. Massie is still clueless, but fun to watch. I adore these books because they're catty and full of fashion, crushes, and friendship drama. Reviewed by: Jennifer Rummel

What I didn't like about this book was that I didn't get why Syd was called Mrs. Potts if she was a ninth grader. What I did like was that Claire found her own friends that weren't stuck up or snobby. I wish there was more lip kissing with Claire and Cam in it. They are so cute as a couple.

I love this book. One of my favorites. I forget what shipping place I bought from but it came within the time. Excellent condition. Plus I think I bought it used for one cent in the condition good or like new. Overall; great writing, shipping, cost, quality.

just.....wow. Massie was real here. It wasn't all about I can't lose this I must be the best. She really cried. She really hurt. With the title a pun on the song These Boots Are Made For Walking, that seems to be just what Claire does. Abandoning the PC while they 'quote-unquote' upgrade, Claire finds new friends who like her for her. This. Means. WARRIOR,,OUT
